pavements and side streets, past buildings whose lavish display of fluttering banners, flags and streamers attested the cordiality of singing patriotic airs.

So the Grand Army of the Republic, many thousand strong, to-day marched up the broad, smooth asphalted Pennsylvania avenue. along whose rough cabblestenes, as members of the greatest of modern armies, they had marched twenty-seven years ago, tired, dusty, travel-s'sined, war-worn, but with nerce exultation and pride born of the knowledge of their deeds and accomplish-

They were still proud that they had been members of that great army, but in the years which had thinned their ranks the herce war Much Exc tement Over the Resumpspirit had died away and left little behind but a feeling of joy and good will to all men. A longing to once more murch up the old ment in Washington it found a ready reaponse in the hearts of the old soldiers and being put out into the roads with all their carries a tremendou, shive over which the greatest reunion of them sil. Many an old soldier who had never let able to attend other runions had said that come what might he must see the old comrades once more beother runions had said that come what might be must see the old comrades once more be-fore the last call sounded, as one old best negro veteran, whose homest but poverty-stricken appearance had caused a bystauder to question him, remarked: "I had to sell my stove to get here, but dere sin't no Winter cold enough to chill dis ole body if I can only see Washuntun and de ole soldiers ergin."

On the lawn adjoining the south wing of the Treatury Building, in a large covered at and named in honor of Lincoln and prettipy decorated with bunting, evergreen and portraits, some eight hundred young school girls in white dreases and red caps and white vests, each with a small American flag in her hand, entered with all the life and earnest-name that only a young and innocent child can show into the spirit of the occasion. With waving of dags, merry shouts of joy and ringing peals of gladness they sped on their way the veterans whose preliminary line or march to the Capitol took them past their the Court of Oyer and Terminer this morning.

In its freshness and naturalness the picture of the occasion.

Further down the avenue near the Central Market the colored school girls were massed together on a stand and with melodious voices blended harmoniously in a grand chorus they renewed the greeting to the marching Grand Army posts.

At the hour of the start the Capitol was the central point of a friendly army, massed for a half mile or more square on most of the streets radiating from it.

On all sides the eye gazed on nothing but aged men, pianily attired in blue clothes, with gill buttons and slouch halfs, save an occasional post with while helmers and except where showed the bright uniforms of bands, of which there seemed enough to sound a trumpet call that would shake the nation.
